Operatory Lights

Dental Magnification

Lamp Arm

Dental operating lights or dental operatory lights are a standard fixture in every dental practice, because without these lights dentistry would be literally be in the dark ages. Something as simple as lightning the oral cavity can actually make or break the success of a dental operatory. Operatory lights are permanently mounted to the ceiling, cabinet, wall or delivery system and have a variety of swing arm options. These dental lights are powered by either halogen or LED technology and are adjustable to the needs of the dentist, hygienist and assistant. When choosing a light for your operatory, ensure it works with your delivery system, cabinetry and if your preferred position during procedures is compatible. Different lights have different color temperatures and lux (light intensity ratings), so be sure these are compatible with the rest of your operatory lighting.

Infection control is an important concern in any healthcare facility, including dental offices. Many products are available to prevent cross contamination and reduce infection risks. Dental barriers for patients, such as chair covers, drapes, instrument sleeves and dental eye protection help protect patients. Dental isolation and retraction devices such as dental cheek retractors, dental rubber dam materials and frames should be disposable or autoclavable. When treating a patient, infection control products such as dental gloves, dental masks, dental sleeve covers and disposable dental apparel should be used to prevent cross contamination. After dental procedures, products for cleanup such as dental surface disinfectants and vacuum line cleaners are available.

Clinic Set-up | Medical Sewage Treatment System
Radiographic imaging is an essential part of diagnosis, documentation and treatment planning at any modern dental practice. Digital x-ray technologies provide numerous advantages over their film predecessors. Digital radiography systems allow clinicians and patients to instantly view images on a computer, iPad, or operatory TV screen at a higher resolution than film. Digital files can easily be shared with insurance companies or referral partners, and because they can be stored on a hard drive, they are easier to manage and find. Along with these advantages, digital x-ray technologies use less radiation than film counterparts, making it safer for patients and clinicians while also providing practices with a greener option as they eliminate the use of photo processing chemicals. Digital imaging goes beyond just adding efficiencies to the dental imaging process because the latest technologies allow clinicians to capture images and use them in ways impossible with film.

Whether building a new dental practice from scratch, upgrading an existing practice or expanding a practice with additional operatories or new specialty services, numerous pieces of dental equipment will be needed to complete the project. More than just the technologies used to treat patients, dental equipment also includes the utility systems that power a dental practice, the systems used for infection control protocols, and even all of the equipment used to set up a portable dental operatory. Dental equipment can be divided into many categories to encompass the types of equipment that every practice needs in order to treat patients as well as the equipment required in practices providing specialized services such as endodontics or oral surgery.

Dental consumables include products such as implants, prosthetics, braces, crowns, dental impression materials, and others. They are used for the treatment of dental disorders such as tooth restoration, problems associated with gingival tissues, dental impairments, dental caries, and periodontal diseases.

Whether seeing a patient for a routine prophy appointment, or providing more complex restorative, periodontal or endodontic treatment, a variety of dental consumables will be a part of the workflow. From capturing an impression to placing a crown to performing cosmetic whitening, highly specialized consumables are needed to complete your task. Finding the right consumables for your practice and the case at hand is important.

The behind-the-scenes support network of restorative dentistry, Dental Laboratories design and fabricate a majority of both fixed and removable dental prostheses. Based on a prescription along with anatomical and shade information provided by a dentist, a dental laboratory technician can create an esthetic and functional replacement for a patient’s missing or damaged teeth. A wide range of specialized dental laboratory materials, supplies, equipment and technologies are used to fabricate these crowns, bridges, implant-borne restorations, full dentures, removable partials and more. A mix of artistic skill, anatomical expertise and technological know-how, the work of a trained dental lab technician is designed to fit seamlessly into a patient’s mouth to restore both function and esthetics. While some dental lab techniques have evolved little over time, new technologies and materials are rapidly changing what a dental lab looks like, and these changes are impacting the dental laboratory products needed to operate a successful lab business. CAD/CAM systems have revolutionized the industry and have opened up new business models for a range of dental laboratories.
